QUESTION 3: SOCIO-POLITICAL ART, INCLUDING RESISTANCE ART OF THE 1970s AND 1980s

In her new solo exhibition titled The Purple Shall Govern, Mary Sibande draws inspiration from a specific incident in South Africa's history where, in the late 1980s, people were marching for equality in Cape Town. During the march, the police sprayed everyone with a water cannon filled with purple dye to enable them to identify and arrest anti-apartheid protestors.

'Colour is important in South Africa – we make it important,' Sibande says. 'Colour places you, colour tells where you are within the geography of South Africa. And, when I thought of colour, I realised that I cannot ignore the incident that happened in 1989.'

Yvette Dunn was born in 1979 in Durban, KwaZulu-Natal, during the apartheid era. She is of mixed Scottish/IsiZulu heritage. She is inspired by racial labels imposed on us by society. Her work deals with issues of birth right and blood links.

The Cape Town march for equality motivated Sibande's interest in the roles that colour played in the history of this country, while Dunn's mixed heritage influenced her artwork.

With the above statement in mind, study the images in FIGURES 3a and 3b, and write an essay in which you consider the following:

- The significance of the use of the colour in FIGURES 3a and 3b
- The symbolic meaning of the colour purple

- Analysis of the TWO artworks
- Use of material and techniques
- Subject matter/message/themes and meaning in the artworks

This can be repeated a number of times, depending on the particular technique.

QUESTION 7: GENDER ISSUES: MASCULINITY AND FEMININITY

Gender is a broad term intended to distinguish between male and female. The issue of selected social roles associated with gender and gender equality is explored by artists on a daily basis. Many artists experiment with different materials to 'create conversations' around issues of masculinity, femininity and culture.

In the works presented in FIGURES 7a to 7c, Penny Siopis explores the issue of 'shame' and 'vulnerability', whereas Willem de Kooning represents women in an offensive aggressive manner. Both artists question our views around issues of masculinity, femininity and culture.

Using the examples provided in FIGURES 7a to 7c, as well as examples of your own choice, write an essay in which you discuss the above statement by considering the following:

- Style and technique. Consider the manner in which the artworks have been represented.
- Messages and meanings in the works. Consider the title of each work.
- Your views around the issues of masculinity, femininity, race and culture within artworks and the art world
